Your generosity is the beginning

Last year, more than 4,000 grants were made possible through your generosity, totalling more than $46 million.

The document you hold in your hands is like the proverbial tip of the iceberg. These 50 pages are, as the title says, the results of your generosity.

They are also the result of countless hours of hard work, meetings, and research by dedicated volunteers and staff. The projects highlighted within these pages are ideas to improve our community. They involve hundreds of people and millions of dollars. They are intended to make our communities healthier, stronger and more livable.

If you are anything like me, you will read the following page (2012 By the Numbers) with a sense of wonder. Last year, more than 4,000 grants were made possible through your generosity, totaling more than $46 million.

It's amazing when you think about it... With this money and these projects, connections are made, lives are changed, people are fed or housed, opportunities are taken, families are strengthened, young people are educated, music is written, art is created, and fragile environments are protected. All this lies below the surface of the numbers quoted on that page.

Looking back over the 70-year history of Vancouver Foundation, I often wonder if our founders could have foreseen the monumental impact their efforts have made in helping communities become more connected and engaged or the inroads we've made to stem the tide of youth homelessness.

It's through the generosity of our donors past and present, whose foresight in leaving a gift through their estate, setting up a fund or supporting a specific project, that has enabled us to support these projects — projects that will contribute to the betterment of our society for years to come.

That's one of the reasons we publish this document — to remind you, and to remind ourselves, of the important work we do together and the difference we make.

As President & CEO of Vancouver Foundation, I am pleased to provide you with this edition of The Results of Your Generosity for 2012. Thank you for your support and encouragement.

2012 By the Numbers

In 2012, Vancouver Foundation helped donors establish 71 new funds (compared with 62 the year before). We now manage almost

1,500
funds with assets totaling more than $814 million

These comprise:

800
Agency and Designated Funds*

475
Donor Advised Funds*

200
Community Impact and Field of Interest Funds*

In 2012, Vancouver Foundation and our donors made more than

4,000
grants, totaling more than $46 million
to registered charities
across Canada

These comprise:

2,100
Grants directed by donors

375
Grants decided by Advisory Committees

1,525
Distributions to charities

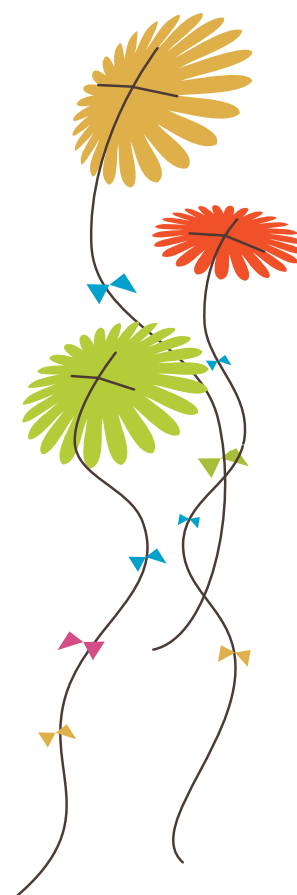

Since 1943, Vancouver Foundation has received almost $918 million in donations, and given out more than $917 million in grants and distributions (while currently maintaining $814 million in assets — that's the power of endowment at work).

Year in Review

If 2011 was “a year of discovery” for Vancouver Foundation, then 2012 was the year we put our knowledge into action. It was a year of making connections and partnerships; a year of initiating change; when we applied learnings from projects of the previous 12 months, and in the process, changed the direction of our organization.

Setting Foundation Priorities

Youth Homelessness Initiative

Youth homelessness continued to be a priority for the Foundation, with particular attention to where we could make the most impact. Our Youth Homelessness Initiative focuses on those youth most vulnerable to homelessness. In the Vancouver Foundation Priorities section of this book, (see pages 5-6), you will find an overview of the Initiative and a summary of the work we did in this area in 2012.

Connections and Engagement

Our priority-setting initiative, which began with community consultations in 2011, continued to drive our activities in 2012 with the release of our report, Connections and Engagement: A Survey of metro Vancouver. The release of the survey results and discussion of potential solutions created a storm of media and public interest. It was as if we had tapped into a collective community nerve bringing the issue of isolation and disconnection in Vancouver out of the shadows and into the light.

Many BC residents recognized the importance of strengthening neighbourhood and cross-cultural connections as a way of dealing with personal isolation. We saw our existing Neighbourhood Small Grants program as an ideal vehicle to address these issues and have begun looking at opportunities to expand the program throughout metro Vancouver over the next five years.

We report our 2012 Connections and Engagement work in more detail in the Priorities section (see pages 7-10), including an overview of public engagement and granting activities in this area.

In addition to our priority work, here are a few project highlights and milestones Vancouver Foundation achieved during 2012:

Vancouver Foundation among first charities in Canada to be accredited

It's estimated there are more than 161,000 registered charities and non-profit organizations in Canada, with more than 20,000 in BC alone. In 2012, Vancouver Foundation was one of the first charities in Canada to be accredited under new national standards for non-profit organizations. The Foundation was awarded the distinction by Imagine Canada, the national organizing body for Canadian charities, under its new Standards Program.

The voluntary program offers accreditation, via a third-party peer review process, to charities and non-profits that can demonstrate excellence in five key areas: board governance; financial accountability and transparency; ethical fundraising; staff management; and volunteer involvement.

Greenest City Fund

Environmental awareness was another important theme for the Foundation in 2012.

We signed an agreement with the City of Vancouver to establish the Greenest City Fund. The goal of this four-year, $2 million fund is to help make Vancouver the greenest city in the world by 2020.

In the first year of the program, 150 community-led green projects were supported for a total of $538,000. Those projects included: helping families connect to nature near their home; making small Vancouver businesses more energy efficient; holding bike skills courses for low-income individuals; and creating a sustainable, community-supported fishery for Vancouver.

The news release and a complete list of projects are available in the news section of our website at: www.vancouverfoundation.ca/whatsnew

Youth Engagement

A group of 25 youth from across metro Vancouver, including several members of our Youth Philanthropy Council, planned and hosted a summit for immigrant and refugee youth in Vancouver in October 2011. Out of that summit came the Fresh Voices from Long Journeys Youth Advisory Team – a group of immigrant and refugee youth who hosted an inspiring series of presentations and dialogues in 2012. During the dialogues, they discussed how youth can influence (or have a stronger voice) on policy issues that impact immigrant and refugee youth in the school system, immigration and the family settlement process.

The Youth Advisory Team, together with Vancouver Foundation, the BC Representative of Children and Youth, and local community agencies, hosted dialogues in Nanaimo, Prince George, Victoria and Langley.

Resilient Capital

Vancity and Vancouver Foundation partnered in 2011 to create Resilient Capital, an investment program that connects financial capital with growing social enterprises. The program helps organizations that add to the social, economic, and environmental well-being of their communities to grow by giving them access to financial capital that is not commonly provided by other financial institutions.

Transactions funded last year totaled more than $3 million to support nine organizations, and the program continues to recruit prospective depositors.

Community Causes

Community Causes are a series of information sessions organized by the Foundation to heighten awareness about various issues of concern in the community. Typically, a small group of concerned citizens are invited to a presentation on a particular field of interest. Through a site-tour and discussion, participants learn what Vancouver Foundation is doing to make a difference in that area, and how they can help.

In 2012, a successful event featured discussions of Connections and Engagement and the Neighbourhood Small Grants program in December at South Vancouver Neighbourhood House. To find out more about Community Causes, contact Kristin Helgason at 604-629-5186.

2012 Matching Program

Vancouver Foundation's Matching Gift program gives donors the chance to do even more good. Through the generosity of anonymous donors, we are able to offer a special incentive to support specific programs.

We will match, dollar-for-dollar, gifts of $1,000 or more to a program – even two for one in some cases – thus multiplying the impact of the gift.

In 2012, Vancouver Foundation had a very successful Matching Gift program, in which 38 funds across our Fields of Interest received matching grants worth almost $365,000. This additional money allows us to increase grants and, in some cases, approve grants that might otherwise be turned down due to lack of funds.

Giving Well celebrates women in philanthropy

Giving Well is Vancouver Foundation's first giving circle. It brings together women philanthropists to learn about current community needs and to collectively support women's issues.

In 2012, 23 women participated in Giving Well, and granted $24,000 to five charitable projects: Strengthening Aboriginal Women; Surrey Mobile Assault Response Team; Fab Girls Group at Little Mountain Neighbourhood House; Girls Move Mountains in Revelstoke; and Pathways Out of Poverty at the Association of BC Neighbourhood Houses. For more details see our website at: www.vancouverfoundation.ca/givingwell

Partnerships in the Community

Vancouver Foundation has created numerous programs that address issues and engage citizens. The following organizations operate as affiliates under the umbrella of Vancouver Foundation.

Established in 2006 by Vancouver Foundation, the Giving in Action Society (GIA) is a registered charitable organization that helps families who care for a family member with a disability. In 2012 GIA assisted more than 140 families by providing $4.2 million toward the purchase of 75 wheelchair-accessible vehicles and 70 home renovations.

www.givinginaction.ca

Endowment 150 offers eligible people with disabilities a one-time gift of $150 to help their Registered Disability Savings Plan (RDSP) grow. To date, the Endowment 150 program has distributed almost $460,000 in grants to over 3,300 BC residents who have opened a Registered Disability Savings Plan, including 682 contributions of $150 in 2012.

www.endowment150.ca

The Immigrant Employment Council of British Columbia (IEC-BC) stimulates the integration of skilled immigrant talent into the province's workforce by fostering solutions, building connections and being a champion to help employers attract and retain skilled immigrant talent. Key activities in 2012 included launching an immigrant workforce development initiative in northern BC, partnering with BC Human Resources Management Association to develop an online tool to assist employers in assessing international credentials, experience and English language proficiency, and engaging more mentoring employers.

Non-Profit Labour Market Partnership Program

The Non-Profit Labour Market Partnership (LMP) Program focuses on working for all non-profit organizations across BC to address key human resource issues within the sector. The recent launch of LMP's THRIVE Project marks the initial step in being the go-to source for resources and services for human resource management, and creating a network of support for today and tomorrow's workforce.

www.thriveproject.ca

The Government/Non-Profit Initiative (GNPI) Leadership Council is currently taking a brief hiatus while the Council Office, in partnership with stakeholders, develops and implements some key projects, and considers the future strategic role of GNPI. The Council's Working Group successfully drafted two documents on a Full-Cost Financial Model and outcomes-based reporting requirements, and piloted a mentorship program for leaders in government and the non-profit sector.

www.nonprofitinitiative.gov.bc.ca

Overall, 2012 was a watershed year for Vancouver Foundation. The programs we sponsored, partnerships we made and lives we changed all helped make British Columbia a better place to work, live and grow.

None of this would have been possible without the trust our committed donors place in this unique organization, allowing us to continue the good work Vancouver Foundation started 70 years ago.

Youth Homelessness Initiative

When people feel connected and engaged in their community it creates shared values and a vision for the future. Building bridges and bonds of trust between the many disparate groups in metro Vancouver helps bring people together to address larger societal issues. And one overriding issue people are concerned about, according to our research, is youth homelessness.

Building upon our four-year track record of addressing homelessness issues, Vancouver Foundation renewed its commitment to breaking the cycle of youth homelessness in metro Vancouver in 2012 through our Youth Homelessness Initiative.

Recognizing that more than 40% of homeless youth have been in government care (i.e. foster care, juvenile detention, etc.), our focus is to help young people find housing and resources that offer safe, healthy pathways to adulthood. We believe strengthening systems and community services that ensure youth are connected, valued and safely housed before and after they transition out of government care will reduce youth homelessness in metro Vancouver. Our four linked strategies to address youth homelessness include:

1. Youth engagement

Youth who have been in government care will be key partners in the Youth Homelessness Initiative, along with trusted adult allies and organizations. We are creating a Youth Advisory Circle made up of youth currently and formerly in government care and frontline youth workers to guide the program.

2. Community impact grants

Vancouver Foundation will continue to provide grants to support community services and practices designed to ensure at-risk young people find safe supported housing. These vital projects will offer potential for scale through larger public or private investments.

3. Public policy research and learning

There is currently little to no support available to help youth transition successfully out of care. Vancouver Foundation will work with youth, community and government stakeholders to strengthen provincial, regional and local public policy needed to protect and support at-risk youth.

4. Communications and public engagement

Ensuring youth are connected, valued and safely housed benefits not only the youth in question, but also society as a whole. However, public awareness of and the appetite for systemic solutions to youth homelessness remains relatively low.

Vancouver Foundation will initiate and support targeted communications and engagement strategies designed to increase public support for youth successfully transitioning out of care and work to increase public will to invest in solutions.

Vancouver Foundation Priorities

Youth Homelessness Initiative Grants in 2012

Funding programs that provide housing, support and skills development for at-risk youth was a major focus of Vancouver Foundation's Youth Homelessness Initiative in 2012. Some of the initiatives we supported include:

Broadway Youth Resource Centre (BYRC) – Annex

Vancouver Foundation provided a two-year grant of $106,640 to BYRC for the supported housing program at the ANNEX. The ANNEX is a valuable resource for kids needing transition time on their path to long-term housing security. Funds will enable the organization to sustain this well-regarded resource over the next two years, at least until new youth units are constructed as part of the new BYRC hub.

Watari – Transitioning to Independence Project II (TTIP-II)

Vancouver Foundation provided a two-year grant of $70,000 to support the extension of the TTIP-II program, initially funded by Vancouver Foundation to provide housing support for pregnant and parenting homeless youth. An independent evaluation by the McCreary Centre Society concluded "that the TTIP-II program provided young people with the support and services they needed to find and maintain housing. Participants demonstrated greater housing stability over the course of their participation in the program, as well as improved life-skills and psychosocial functioning. One year after intake into the program, all youth reported improved confidence in parenting, and most reported improvements in their parenting skills, due to their involvement in TTIP." Funding will help leverage additional support for TTIP-II over the next two years.

RainCity Housing – LGTB2S+ Housing for Youth

Vancouver Foundation awarded a grant of $250,000 over two years to RainCity Housing and Support Society to support a two-year pilot project to provide housing and build employment, education and peer networking support to lesbian, gay, transgender, bisexual, questioning and two-spirit (LGTB2S+) youth between the ages of 18 and 25. The program was created to help support LGTB2S+ youth who experience discrimination or harassment from housing service providers, or rejection from their families and gender-segregated shelters.

Connections and Engagement

In response to our community consultation in 2011, Vancouver Foundation focused on building a connected and engaged community in 2012. To do this, we needed a starting point.

Connections and Engagement: A Survey of metro Vancouver

In the summer, we conducted a metro Vancouver-wide survey to measure residents' connections and engagement. The survey of 3,841 people, conducted by Sentis Market Research, measured residents' connections and engagement on three levels: personal connections, neighbourhood connections and connections to the community-at-large. It also measured actions and attitudes, as well as the barriers that prevent people from becoming engaged in the life of their neighbourhood and community. The findings quantified what the community consultations indicated:

- Metro Vancouver can be a hard place to make friends. One in four respondents reported feeling alone more often than they would like to be.
- Neighbourhood relationships are cordial but weak. Many respondents know at least a few of their neighbours' first names but connections typically stop there.
- Many people are retreating from community life.
- There are limits to how people see diversity as an opportunity to forge meaningful connections.
- Certain groups of people are struggling more than others to feel connected and engaged.

A report on the findings was released on June 18, 2012. This was followed by mini-reports on key findings, which were released throughout the summer. The full report and mini-reports are available on the Vancouver Foundation website at: www.vancouverfoundation.ca/connect-engage

“ I loved the discussion and the sense of how to form a community that emerged... After last night, I have a reinvigorated sense of my own luck at living in such a tight-knit community and having such close relationships with my neighbours, many of whom have become friends.

- SFU Public Square attendee

Vancouver Foundation Priorities

Public Engagement

The survey results generated hundreds of comments, emails and calls, particularly in response to a week-long Vancouver Sun series that delved into the key findings. This coincided with a sold-out PechaKucha event at The Vogue theatre on the theme of community connections.

In the Fall, Vancouver Foundation partnered with Simon Fraser University (SFU) to launch their inaugural Public Square, a community summit called Alone Together: Connecting in the Urban Environment. SFU selected the issue our public consultations uncovered – urban isolation and disconnection – as the theme of the week-long summit, which was designed to raise public awareness, spark dialogue and generate solutions.

The Public Square event was our most extensive public engagement exercise on our connections and engagement initiative. One of its most significant outcomes was the City of Vancouver's creation of an Engaged City Mayor's Task Force. The Task Force will identify ways to increase neighbourhood engagement and improve the ways in which the City interacts and connects with its residents.

Grant opportunities

SFU Public Square Library Challenge

As part of the SFU summit, we provided two grants of $10,000 for the Big Ideas for Libraries in Communities challenge. The competition was designed to challenge people's notion of what a library is, and to inspire creative approaches from community members towards helping libraries expand their role in building community and increasing their civic engagement. North Vancouver District Public Library's "Community Pod" project and Surrey Library's The Little Free Library That Could were chosen because they most closely represented projects that could strengthen bonds between people in their neighbourhoods, build bridges between people across boundaries of diversity, and encourage active participation in neighbourhood and community activities.

BC Ideas

Vancouver Foundation was one of several partners with BC Ideas, which ran a province-wide online competition for $270,000 in grants. In total, BC Ideas attracted 446 entries from 82 communities; 33 entries were selected for their promising solutions to the social challenges facing the province, including homelessness, literacy, skills development, health, and community inclusion for people with disabilities. Gen Why Media won a special $5,000 grant inspired by the findings of the Connections and Engagement Survey. The grant will help support the organization's Bring Your Boomers series of dialogues that will convene high-profile speakers of different generations to explore critical issues and create new insights and understandings.

Connecting and Engaging in the Community

Neighbourhood Small Grants

Our Connections and Engagement Survey revealed that we are so close together in metro Vancouver and yet so far apart. In our community consultations, people talked about their growing sense of isolation, disconnection and civic malaise and indifference; the feeling that more and more they live in silos, separated by ethnicity, language, income and age. They also told us that the best investment Vancouver Foundation could make would be to help build bridges between our various communities – between neighbours and neighbourhoods, and between residents of different backgrounds.

They said we cannot even begin to tackle the big issues like poverty and homelessness without a connected and engaged citizenry; people with shared experiences and mutual obligations. And they said they need this for the better of the community-at-large and for themselves as individuals.

Research backs this up. There is less crime in neighbourhoods where people know each other's names. In communities where there are strong social connections and a high level of civic engagement, children thrive, seniors are less isolated, and people are healthier.

And so our goal for the next few years is to deepen people's connections and engagement in their community in ways that advance everyone's interests. We know we cannot do this on our own. So we continue to consider what initiatives we can work on with our community partners to enhance our residents' experience of being part of a larger community. Since 1999, we've been doing just that through Neighbourhood Small Grants (NSG).

Our NSG program helps build community and strengthen connections right where people live – in their own neighbourhoods. With grants of up to $1,000, the program supports residents who have small but powerful ideas to bring people together and make their neighbourhoods safe, vibrant and healthy.

This year, as part of our goal to deepen people's connections and engagement in their community, we expanded the NSG program through six Vancouver partners and four cities: North Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster and Surrey. New Westminster was the newest pilot location and garnered an impressive response over two granting cycles. The program was also rebranded this year, sporting a new website that aims to encourage more interaction between neighbourhoods and among residents through the sharing of stories and events. To learn more, visit: www.vancouverfoundation.ca/nsg

10 Neighbourhood Locations

1 New Pilot Location (New Westminster)

16 Partnerships with Community Organizations

I do agree that Vancouver is lonely if you don't belong somewhere and I commend the Neighbourhood Houses and Vancouver Foundation for realizing the importance of community.

Neighbourhood Small Grants Project Highlights

Surrey

Kimberly Wood lives in Surrey with her partner and four children. Kimberly is deaf. So is her partner, and two of her children. When Kimberly found that her children were having difficulty communicating with other kids in the neighbourhood, she decided to do something about it. With an NSG grant of $1,000, she ran a week-long workshop on deaf culture called Hands-On Fun Week. Thirty kids attended and learned what it's like to be deaf (with a little help from earplugs), how to sign simple phrases, how deaf people listen to music, and much more. Almost 100 people attended a neighbourhood barbecue at the end of the week. The workshop was so popular Kimberly is thinking of running it again.

New Westminister

Residents of New Westminister got a chance to learn about the traditional Indonesian art of batik-making, which is the application of rich colours and unique patterns on textiles. Liza Wajong led the project and hosted two full-house workshops in 2012. Not only was it a way to share her heritage but it also brought the community together to learn, express their creativity and have fun.

The batik-making process is very collaborative and got people working together. Participants spent the session exploring Indonesian culture by using traditional tools and authentic natural dyes to trace patterns and dye the fabric. The participants loved the experience so much, Liza is looking to expand the batik-making workshops to be able to welcome more residents in the next year.

Vancouver: South Vancouver – Collingwood

In the summer of 2010, South Hill Vancouver community resident and artist, Shary Bartlett, was inspired to develop a project in her community that could bring her neighbourhood together. She decided to work with her community to co-create a depiction of the view of the North Shore mountains in a woven tapestry. "Seventy five per cent of my neighbourhood uses English as a second language," she explains. "Weaving arts are familiar to every culture, making it an ideal tool to create intercultural communication and fusion. Conversation and new friendship can't help but emerge across a loom!" Her Neighbourhood Small Grants helped pay for materials and supplies, and two and half years later, resulted in the completion of the South Hill Sunset tapestry – a beautiful art piece woven by many hands from South Hill, and the legacy of a community now strengthened by the experience.

To read more about these and other Neighbourhood Small Grants projects, visit the "Success Stories" section on our NSG website: www.vancouverfoundation.ca/NSG

Downtown East Side (DTES) Small Arts Grants

Our DTES Small Arts Grants program is a partnership with the Carnegie Community Centre that gives DTES artists the opportunity to advance their careers by expanding their portfolios and showcasing their work. We received 115 submissions this year, 71 of which were funded for a total of $65,000 in grants.

We will continue to use the results of the Connections and Engagement Survey to focus on how we can help build bridges between our various communities – between neighbours and neighbourhoods; between residents of different ages, cultures and backgrounds; between marginalized people and the larger community – with the goal of helping residents of metro Vancouver connect and engage for the greater good.

Our Granting Programs

Fields of Interest

Our connections and engagement initiative was born from a desire to focus Vancouver Foundation's work on where it could have greater impact in the community. While we set out to measure how residents were experiencing life in metro Vancouver through our 2012 Connections and Engagement Survey, of greater importance was an understanding of how we can strengthen our community.

With these results in hand, we began to look at our granting areas—our Fields of Interest—and consider how we could support initiatives that help people have a greater sense of connection to and engagement in their community, and to facilitate projects that create bridges and enable disparate people, organizations, neighbourhoods and entire communities to work together in ways that advance everyone's interests.

In this section, we give you a summary of the 2012 granting activity in each of our Fields of Interest. This year, we re-introduced two granting cycles—Spring and Fall—and distributed over 300 grants totalling more than $9 million. We received hundreds of proposals for many worthwhile projects. Unfortunately, we cannot fund them all. Overwhelming demand limits our funding to less than 25 per cent of requests.

Over 150 volunteer experts from the community — scientists, academics, youth, researchers and front-line staff — volunteer their time to help us make informed decisions. They share with us their expertise and intimate knowledge of the issues, the needs of the community, and the organizations active in their fields. Thanks to them, our donors can be assured that Vancouver Foundation is supporting the most worthwhile and effective projects in communities throughout the province.

The grants in the following pages have been made possible through the generosity of Vancouver Foundation fundholders and donors — many present-day, and many of whom have long since passed, but who had the foresight to establish an endowment that could address priority needs. Also, during each grant cycle, we provide our active fundholders and donors an opportunity to preview the project proposals we receive from the community. Through our Book of Opportunities, many donors have chosen to support projects using their Vancouver Foundation fund or by making an additional donation.

On behalf of the community, and all those whose lives have been improved by the myriad of projects, we thank the generous donors who made this possible.

Book of Opportunities Donors

Through the following funds, Vancouver Foundation was able to support a greater number of projects in the Book of Opportunities. These fundholders relied on our volunteer advisors to evaluate their chosen projects. Without the help of these funds, many great projects would not have been possible.

Animal Welfare

Animals play a valuable role in our society. How we treat and care for them reflects our community values. Vancouver Foundation is committed to supporting strategies that protect and enhance the welfare of all animals, wild, domestic and farm, through research, outreach, education and direct care. British Columbia is home to a wide range of charitable organizations with a mission to improve the welfare of animals.

In 2012, Vancouver Foundation issued a request for proposals for small capacity-building grants for animal welfare organizations. Many of these organizations struggle to find funding for resources to engage in organizational planning and implementation for enhanced performance and efficiency.

Of the 26 applications received in 2012, 13 projects were funded with grants totaling $94,051 directed to a variety of capacity-building projects for animal welfare organizations such as volunteer training, creation of marketing and fundraising collateral, website development and initiatives to increase public support.

Project Highlights

Project: A Way Forward – Building Organizational Capacity
Grant Received: $8,000
Location: Comox Valley

This grant was used to help expand the capacity of the Mountaineire Avian Rescue Society through the development of a strategic plan, social media and marketing, and improvements to the database management system.

Organization:

Mountaineire Avian Rescue Society rescues and rehabilitates injured or orphaned indigenous wildlife and releases healthy animals back into the wild. The Society also holds community events and offers educational programs to schools, clubs and other groups.

---

Project: Pet First Aid Course
Grant Received: $3,480
Location: Kootenay

A 10-hour pet first aid instruction course will be provided for approximately 25 volunteers. The course teaches skills for dealing with cat and dog emergencies including: bleeding, broken bones; choking and CPR. This will enable volunteers to provide more complete and effective care for animals, as well as being able to respond and react appropriately if and when a pet becomes ill or injured.

Organization:

Creston Pet Adoption and Welfare Society (PAWS) is dedicated to rescuing and sheltering stray, abused, abandoned, and unwanted pets in the Creston Valley area. PAWS provides veterinary care, spay/neuter, rehabilitation, socialization, (re)training, care and compassion to pets until loving homes can be found. PAWS also provides foster homes for animals needing special care or those that do not do well in a shelter environment.

Arts & Culture

Arts and Culture grants support and encourage the growth and sustained presence of excellence in arts and cultural activities among diverse cultural communities throughout British Columbia. The funded projects in 2012 offer a cross-section of disciplines, including visual arts, museum projects, music, theatre, dance, literature and film. Also included are multimedia projects and projects that span different cultures.

The Advisory Committee developed the following criteria in determining the successful submissions:

- Artistic Intention: Artistic practice that demonstrates depth, potential impact, and/or the courage to explore an individual's or a group's artistic vision.
- Creativity and Growth: Innovation and exploring new possibilities, with a willingness to take risks and embrace new ideas.
- Diversity of Conception and Participation: Including inter-disciplinary collaboration and inclusivity of different cultures, peoples, experiences, practices, and world views.
- Community Engagement and Social Connection: Fostering belonging and forming bonds between and within communities, cultivating audiences and social connections.
- Organizational Capacity: Ability to carry out the project as planned.

Demand for funding in this field was highest in the Spring cycle with 146 submissions received (compared to 86 in the fall) — over half of the overall total of 232 for the year. In all, 66 submissions were approved, representing projects from mainly metro Vancouver, but also from Vancouver Island, the Interior, the Fraser region, and Northern BC.

Project Highlights

Project: FICTION(S)
Grant Received: $25,000
Location: Vancouver

FICTION(S) is a three-part series: Do You See What I Mean? (a 2.5 hour, blindfolded tour of Vancouver's Downtown), Human Library (visitors check out a 'human book'), and Sometimes I Think, I Can See You (writers muse, reflect and devise narratives of what they observe in public spaces and project their writing live for public viewing). The project furthers the PuSh International Performing Arts Festival's interests in situating the performing arts within the public realm, encouraging new and innovative engagement with local communities and fostering groundbreaking partnerships.

Organization:

The PuSh International Performing Arts Festival is one of Vancouver's signature events. Produced over three weeks each January, the PuSh Festival presents groundbreaking work in the live performing arts. PuSh expands the horizons of Vancouver artists and audiences with work that is visionary, genre-bending, multi-disciplined, startling and original.

---

Project: Extraction
Grant Received: $25,000
Location: Vancouver

Extraction is a bilingual documentary theatre show (in Mandarin and English) that explores Canada/China relations, tar sands development, and China's rise as an economic power through the biographies of four people whose lives have been transformed by these realities. The play aims to add a human dimension to the public conversation about topical, controversial subjects affecting us all—adding new perspectives to illustrate unique experiences.

Organization:

Theatre Conspiracy is a non-profit theatre company that taps the crosscurrents of international culture, society and politics to create, interpret and translate theatre works that speak beyond borders.

Children, Youth & Families

Healthy, resilient families are the building blocks of a healthy society. Whether addressing bullying, supporting diverse immigrant families with small children, enabling youth to use media to share their stories, we increase the well-being of children, youth and families in British Columbia to help create a brighter future for us all. Common themes among approved projects in this field of interest include: youth leadership, arts-based programs, family resource programs, parenting supports, programs for children and youth with special needs, community development and expanding advocacy capacity across the sector.

Of the 56 grants approved in 2012, almost half focused on youth leadership development. The remaining grants were evenly distributed among children and families, with a particular focus on projects that support young children in their early years.

One-third of the projects approved are in the metro Vancouver region, with the remaining projects dispersed throughout Vancouver Island, the Interior and the North.

Children, Youth & Families

Project Highlights

Project: Upstream Solutions for BC's Children and Youth
Grant Received: $100,000
Location: Province-wide

BC's high child poverty rate, under-investment in young children, and weak child labour laws result in too many of BC's children and youth not getting the support they need to reach their full potential. This project addresses the need to raise public awareness of children's health and well-being issues and mobilize support for public policy changes and stronger investments in children and families.

Organization:

First Call: BC Child and Youth Advocacy Coalition, in partnership with Family Services of Greater Vancouver. First Call brings together 90 partner organizations devoted to advancing public policies that support the healthy development of children and youth. Family Services aims to strengthen people, families and communities by providing support and counselling services.

---

Project: Youth Caregivers
Grant Received: $40,000
Location: South Vancouver Island

Youth caregivers take on responsibilities beyond their years to care for a family member in need and often feel overwhelmed. This project will reach out to these youth and their families to offer emotional support and links to practical help. It will also aid health care, schools and the community to be more supportive. This will be the first established program in BC to assist youth caregivers.

Organization:

Cowichan Family Caregivers Support Society is a grassroots community service dedicated to supporting family caregivers.

Field of Interest

Education

Education enables people to improve their lives. When everyone has access to learning, our entire society is more vibrant and adaptable. From engaging potential learners who would otherwise be left behind to developing sustainability curriculum, education grants provided by Vancouver Foundation donors enhance the quality of, and access to, education and lifelong learning opportunities for all British Columbians.

Through education grants, we support projects in British Columbia that:

- contribute to excellence in teaching and learning; foster student citizenship and volunteerism; and strengthen school communities through the participation of students, parents, educators, and the community;
- improve educational access and program completion rates for all students, particularly for those facing economic or cultural barriers or with special needs;
- encourage learners to develop healthy self-esteem including a respectful appreciation of their own and others' individual, ethnic and cultural identity;
- advance educational approaches and facilitate access to enhanced literacy for all age groups;
- disseminate successful program models, and promote innovation in a specific area of learning;
- contribute to the professional growth of educators and the advancement of innovative approaches to learning; and
- have the capacity to transform Aboriginal education, and expand the number, knowledge and skill of Aboriginal educators.

Out of the 28 projects funded in 2012, almost one-fifth had a province-wide focus. While the majority of projects targeted school-aged children, at least one-quarter of the projects were directed toward young adults and mature students. This year, a trend to move education outdoors continued and we supported projects that ranged from nature kindergarten to land-based programs for Aboriginal students, to continuing education opportunities for urban farmers. Aboriginal education, curriculum development, literacy/numeracy projects and environmental education were the top issues addressed through our grants.

Project Highlights

Project: Through a Different Lens
Grant Received: $100,000
Location: Okanagan

This teacher-led project involves 45 teachers from Grades 1-12 who are focusing on alternative methods of instruction and assessment to help all students succeed. The focus is on innovative teaching and assessment practices and the impact these have on our students at risk of not completing school.

Organization:

The Board of Education of School District No. 67 (Okanagan Skaha) is committed to its mission statement of Working Together for Student Success.

---

Project: Let's Get Cooking
Grant Received: $33,333
Location: Vancouver

In partnership with Inner City Youth and Vancouver Community College, the project will develop and present an educational cooking program for street youth and youth with mental illness at risk of homelessness. Let's Get Cooking will develop the youths' food preparation and technical cooking skills and enhance their confidence and social skills. Social workers and psychiatrists will work with the youth to encourage their participation, support them in their recovery and in developing acceptable work behaviors. Youth with mental illness will be supported to succeed in the course, to seek employment, and to move from the street or transitional housing to permanent housing.

Organization:

Coast Mental Health is a recognized leader in developing and delivering innovative programs that positively impact the lives of people with severe mental illness. Coast offers rehabilitative social and recreational programs, life skills training, and wellness activities, volunteer and pre-employment opportunities.

Field of Interest

Environment

Environment grants support the health and resilience of British Columbia's environment in a changing world. We support a range of projects that address environmental issues by advancing policy, increasing public awareness and engagement, and ensuring the development of solutions include communities impacted by environmental challenges.

In 2012, the Advisory Committee continued to focus on two priority areas:

- Freshwater: Long-term sustainability, protection and resilience of freshwater quality and flows; and,
- Habitat Protection and Conservation: Opportunities for community-led habitat protection and conservation solutions, whether in marine or land-based ecosystems.

In addition to these priority areas, additional grants were made for projects that supported public engagement and education, pollution control and waste reduction. Of the 31 applications for environmental grants received, 23 were funded with over half a million dollars granted for projects throughout British Columbia, including eight on Vancouver Island and six in metro Vancouver.

Project Highlights

Project: Riparian Stewardship Workshops
Grant Received: $15,000
Location: Okanagan

The Lower Similkameen territory is in one of Canada's top three endangered ecosystems and contains the largest matrix of riparian wetlands left in the South Okanagan. This project will bring ecologists and community members together for on-site workshops to participate in restoration activities including removing invasive species and planting more than 6,000 indigenous plants. The goal of the workshop is to create life-long stewards of the lands while helping to restore rare and endangered habitat that support many at-risk species.

Organization:

Lower Similkameen Indian Band is responsible for stewarding the largest matrix of intact riparian habitat left in the South Okanagan.

---

Project: Southern Vancouver Island Derelict Fishing Gear Removal Project
Grant Received: $15,000
Location: South Vancouver Island

Derelict fishing gear has an unseen and devastating impact on the marine environment. This grant will be used to develop an on-going program to remove derelict fishing gear in southern BC waters. Since 2002 the Northwest Straits Initiative's Derelict Fishing Gear Program, in Washington State, has removed over 4,000 ghost nets and 2,500 derelict crab pots from Puget Sound. In 2011 the Province of BC removed/disabled derelict crab pots and a seine net from North Pender Island, with a reported 1,799 dead and alive animals recovered.

Organization:

Cetus Research and Conservation Society facilitates the conservation of the marine environment by promoting community stewardship, raising public awareness, conducting research, and fostering activities that directly preserve marine habitats and biological diversity.

Health and Medical Education/Research

Vancouver Foundation's community-based health research grants support initiatives that ensure British Columbians are involved in advancing the health of their own communities.

Through community-based health research, we support projects in British Columbia that:

- are directed at improving health and minimizing health inequities;
- build capacity and communities to undertake community-based health research and promote partnerships between community members and researchers that facilitate reciprocal learning;
- engage communities in problem solving, decision-making, and action through research;
- are informed by previous findings in the area of investigation; and,
- contribute to relevant and measurable change and/or inform public policy.

Of the 14 grants approved in 2012, half the projects were undertaken in the Lower Mainland. Thirty per cent involved research at a province-wide level, and the remaining projects took place in northwest BC, the Thompson/Shuswap area and Haida Gwaii.

Half of the projects focused on research issues that bridge cultural boundaries, and the other half helped position communities to develop more effective health promotion activities and identify barriers to accessing the healthcare system.

Health and Medical Education/Research

Project Highlights

Project: Bridging the Cs: Community, Connectedness and Collaborative Partnerships
Grant Received: $ 236,762
Location: Province-wide

This study is designed to provide new research data on ways to overcome barriers and the role of self-determination to improve health outcomes among clients enduring medical illness (EMI). Individuals living with EMI have markedly elevated rates of cardio-metabolic disturbance including obesity, diabetes, dyslipidaemia and cardiovascular disease. Many authors point to lifestyle factors to account for these increased rates of morbidity and mortality identifying that people with EMI have increased rates of smoking, excess caloric intake, poor diet and lack of exercise.

Organization:

University of Northern BC (UNBC) in partnership with the BC Schizophrenia Society for the Northern Interior. UNBC is one of the leading small research-intensive universities in Canada. The BC Schizophrenia Society works with service providers to achieve a more comprehensive and effective continuum of mental health and addictions services.

---

Project: From Front Door to Grocery Store
Grant Received: $ 75,671
Location: Thompson/Shuswap

Rural BC is experiencing a rapidly aging population, and long-time residents are choosing to remain in their 'home' communities. Most of these communities face significant challenges in meeting the mobility needs of seniors, which are compounded by harsh winters, poor physical infrastructure, and lack of services. The project will engage local seniors in an assessment of shopping and service areas, community facilities, walking routes, and transportation. The project will also involve in-depth interviews to explore considerations such as safety, accessibility, affordability, inclusiveness, helpfulness, and respect.

Organization:

The Community Development Institute at University of Northern BC was established to assist rural and northern BC with capacity building and community development. The Institute is known for undertaking projects that are driven by the needs and aspirations of communities, and partnering with them to provide information and support to help them make decisions about their own futures.

Field of Interest

Health and Social Development

Health and Social Development supports projects that will enhance and improve the broad determinants of health within communities, as outlined by the Public Health Agency of Canada—in particular, projects that help to mitigate the effects of poverty.

Through health and social development grants, we support projects in British Columbia that address:

- Quality of life: create innovative ways to work with people to improve quality of life and in particular those with the potential to create systemic change.
- Health and well-being: build the capacity of community agencies, communities, and volunteers working to advance the health and well-being of individual adults and families.
- Community collaboration: develop inter-agency cooperation, collaboration and dialogue; particularly projects that support public, private and social sector partnerships and those that bridge with other sectors of the community, like arts, environment, business, etc.
- A focus on issues: support issues and how they are approached; specifically issues identified by local citizens and volunteers in the neighbourhood and local community networks.
- Inclusiveness: welcome the presence and participation of groups who have been labeled, marginalized and isolated.

Through 2011 to 2014, the Health and Social Development Field is focused on two priority areas:

- Health and Wellness: projects that enhance community members' ability to access and navigate systems of care and support. Successful projects in this area demonstrate impact at the individual level and present strategies for addressing common barriers.
- Belonging and Inclusion: projects that improve and/or develop community cohesion and connectedness across diverse communities.

Out of the 36 projects funded in 2012, more than half had a Vancouver Lower Mainland focus. The remaining projects were spread out across BC, with small concentrations of projects in the Okanagan, Vancouver Island and the Sunshine Coast. While the majority of projects targeted broad community development, at least 20% of projects were focused on seniors. For 2012, we saw a continuing trend in this field of interest towards seniors' programs and services, and food systems related work. Navigating systems of care and support, and building networks within communities and agencies continue to be top issues within the Health and Social Development field.

Project Highlights

Project: Co-operative Elder Care Initiative
Grant Received: $106,000
Location: Central Vancouver Island

One of the most critical social issues facing Canadians is the nation's rapidly aging demographic and the absence of affordable care for seniors. This project addresses the lack of high quality, affordable and responsive elder care to seniors and their families. By utilizing the tools and knowledge developed in this project, caregivers and community groups will greatly increase their capacity to provide alternative forms of elder care. The project also addresses the serious problem of isolation and loneliness faced by a growing number of seniors as well as the lack of support to their caregivers.

Organization

Alberni-Clayoquot Continuing Care Society is partnered with the BC Co-op Association. The mission of the Continuing Care Society is to provide residential care services that meet the holistic needs of elderly citizens. The BC Co-op Association promotes the co-op model for economic and social development and assists communities in the development of new communities.

---

Project: Surrey Mobile Assault Response Team: Women's Safety Patient Navigator
Grant Received: $39,000
Location: Surrey/Delta

The Surrey Mobile Assault Response Team is an interdisciplinary team of medical, legal and social service practitioners that provides 24-hour emergency crisis response to abused women and children. As a key member of the Surrey Mobile Assault Response Team, the Women's Safety Patient Navigator addresses gaps within the health care system that limit access to critical medical care immediately after an assault. The Women's Safety Patient Navigator plays a key role in the identification, screening, and treatment of domestic violence and sexual assault during a critical window of opportunity — the time between admittance to the emergency room and discharge from the hospital.

Organization

Surrey Women's Centre Society advocates for the safety and well-being of women and children fleeing domestic violence, sexual assault, child abuse and other forms of family violence. Their primary focus area is to increase safety and support for multi-barriered women and children at-risk of serious bodily injury or death. Specifically, collaboration with medical, legal and social service agencies to address systemic barriers that limit access to critical resources in times of need.

Youth Philanthropy Council

The Youth Philanthropy Council (YPC) empowers young people in Vancouver to play a meaningful role in their neighbourhoods by providing grants for programs that encourage youth dignity, inclusiveness, fairness and equality, promote youth voice, and increase opportunities for youth participation.

The Youth Philanthropy Council funds projects that:

- are youth driven and/or include youth in their design, implementation and decision-making;
- build good youth partnerships and connections;
- increase awareness of the diversity of youth ideas and experiences in communities; and,
- support youth-led environmental initiatives that contribute to Vancouver becoming the greenest city by 2020.

All approved YPC projects are within the metro Vancouver area. Of the 31 applications received, 19 projects were approved with $118,810 granted for arts-based programs, and projects that enhance the health and well-being of young people, engage and involve youth in their communities, combat racism and discrimination, and develop sustainability solutions.

Project: FinAlly
Grant Received: $6,500
Location: Vancouver

The FinAlly (short for Find Ally) project's focus is to bring together LGBTQ2S (Lesbian, Gay, Bi, Transgender, Queer and Two-spirit) youth between the ages of 13 and 19 and their allies to explore issues of mutual concern in creating a sense of community and belonging. LGBTQ2S youth work together to identify healthy solutions to common problems through skill building, conflict resolution and body image exercises as well as through media art projects.

Organization:

Leave Out Violence (LOVE) is an award-winning youth violence prevention organization founded on the belief that youth challenged by violence can be agents of change, capable of transforming their own lives, investing themselves in their communities, and making the world a better place.

Project: English Language Learners Welcome Club
Grant Received: $5,000
Location: Vancouver

Youth peers created the English Language Learners Welcome Club for newcomer and immigrant students aged 13 to 19 to feel included and comfortable to practice their English out loud, have fun with youth-to-youth development and delivery of sessions, and learn English that is context and age specific.

Organization:

Vancouver School District 39 enables students to reach their intellectual, social, aesthetic and physical potential in challenging and stimulating settings that reflect the worth of each individual and promotes mutual respect, cooperation and social responsibility.

Disability Supports for Employment

Disability Supports for Employment Fund (DSEF) grants are available to assist eligible organizations throughout BC who are working to increase employment opportunities and the overall rate of employment for persons with disabilities in their communities. The DSEF considers “employment” to mean the full participation of people with disabilities as employees, and/or those activities which may result in employment for them. Applications are considered from organizations working with individuals who have physical and/or mental disabilities and face barriers to employment. Projects must demonstrate that they do not duplicate or replicate existing government-funded programs, supports and services for persons with disabilities. Applications which demonstrate collaborations or partnerships are encouraged.

Through the DSEF, Vancouver Foundation supports innovative approaches to employment and employability for persons with disabilities through the following project types:

- initiatives that will support employment to individuals with disabilities by providing training, skill development, and employment creation and support;
- initiatives that will allow organizations that support people with disabilities to build capacity, learn and explore, and transfer knowledge and learning to others;
- initiatives that will increase employability through community by encouraging attitudinal and systemic change, increased community commitment, and engagement, collaboration and partnership; and,
- initiatives that promote social and economic independence.

Vancouver Foundation typically funds no more than 50% of the proposed project budget. Both cash contributions and in-kind donations of services or goods are considered valid matching components.

Project Highlights

Project: JustWork Economic Initiative
Grant Received: $55,000
Location: Vancouver

JustWork Economic Initiative is a social enterprise that provides employment for vulnerable people with multiple barriers such as physical disabilities, mental illness, homelessness and addictions. JustWork's three social enterprises, JustRenos, JustCatering, and JustPotters, provide dignified, safe and gainful employment that helps individuals gain work experience and skills while they transition to regular jobs. In 2010, JustWork's social enterprises provided meaningful employment for 30 individuals facing major barriers. Seventeen of these individuals have been employed for more than one year, and 11 have been employed for more than two years.

Organization:

JustWork fosters dignified, gainful work opportunities for people facing multiple barriers to work.

---

Project: Youth Works 2012
Grant Received: $25,000
Location: Langley/Fort Langley

This multi-year project proposes to provide summer employment opportunities for youth with developmental disabilities between the ages of 16 and 19. A discovery process will be conducted, in collaboration with school partners, to ascertain each individual's employment skills and interests and match them with a suitable employment opportunity for six weeks during the summer. Individuals will be provided with the required on-the-job support and coaching to ensure their success.

Organization:

Langley Association For Community Living (LACL) is dedicated to the delivery of quality services for children with special needs, adults with developmental disabilities and supports to their families. LACL builds and strengthens community by connecting people of all ages and abilities.

Legacy Giving

Vancouver Foundation ensures your charitable legacy is always invested wisely and directed to the charities and community projects you care about most. When you leave a gift to Vancouver Foundation in your Will, you are planting a seed that, with careful tending, will grow into something that helps build a better tomorrow for future generations.

Estate Gifts

An Estate or Legacy Gift is a planned future donation, given through a Will, life insurance policy or other form of designation. Estate gifts are a source of permanent support for the charitable causes that are most important to you.

In 2012, Vancouver Foundation received Estate gifts from the following generous donors that will benefit communities for generations to come. We extend our heartfelt thanks and condolences to each of their families.

About Legacy Funds

A Legacy Fund is a special type of Donor Advised Fund. It is pre-established with a gift of $1,000 today, with an additional gift to follow through your Estate. Legacy Funds provide peace of mind and flexibility. Vancouver Foundation will work with you to develop a granting plan, detailing which charities and causes you would like to support long into the future. Should your wishes for charitable giving change during your lifetime, you can easily make updates without having to revise your Will.
