

We provided these funds through

6,396
grants

to charities across BC

In 2022 we granted

$87
million

9.6 million

Total dollars supporting communities
that face racial injustice

1,762
charities

are working to improve racial justice including Indigenous and BIPOC-led organizations

In 2022, Vancouver Foundation took significant steps towards advancing racial justice. This commitment led to five key pledges and an emphasis on sharing power with affected communities.

We publicly declared our dedication to combating systemic racism, building on existing initiatives for Indigenous youth and racialized newcomers.

Over 100 new practices were implemented, reshaping how grants were awarded, staff hired, investments made, and stories told.

Vancouver Foundation remains steadfast in its mission to rebalance power dynamics in philanthropy and reduce inequities. Recognizing this as an ongoing journey, we aim for sustainable, lasting change while acting swiftly.

With 120 dedicated team members, advisors, and board members, we strive to create an environment where Indigenous, Black, and racialized communities can thrive. The Foundation acknowledges the invaluable support of community advisors and sector peers and is actively planning further commitments to drive transformative action.

vancouver
foundation